Organizational Overview

Founded in 2006, Gorge Grown Food Network's mission is to build a resilient and inclusive regional food system that improves the health and well-being of our community. Our approach is strategically multi-pronged:

Increase supply: We strive to support local producers and gatherers by bolstering markets and business development. We provide technical assistance and peer-to-peer learning opportunities. We broker relationships between institutional buyers, farmers, fisherpeople, chefs, schools and manufacturers seeking local ingredients.

Increase Access & Demand: We aim to ensure equal access to quality food for all through farmers markets, a Mobile Farmers Market, and the Rural Farmers Market Network. The Veggie Rx Program enables health care providers to prescribe fresh fruits and vegetables to food insecure residents.

Empower and Mobilize: Through partnerships with dozens of key organizations like the Food Security Coalition, Northwest Tribal Food Sovereignty Coalition, Oregon Community Food Systems Network, and the Columbia Gorge Health Council we aim to create lasting change through effective collaboration.

Program Background

Mobile Farmers Market: The Mobile Farmers Market purchases produce from local farmers and brings it to communities throughout the Gorge to increase access to fresh, local food. Since 2018, the Mobile Farmers Market has served 12 communities in Klickitat, Skamania, Hood River, Wasco and Sherman counties. Our market stops are strategically placed to reach populations who experience higher rates of food insecurity and rural communities where the only place to buy food is often a convenience store. A typical day with the Mobile Farmers Market includes: preparing items for the markets as needed (weighing and bagging fresh produce); driving to market locales in the Mobile Farmers Market's sprinter van; setting up short 'pop up' markets in various communities.
